Gershgorin ' s theorem may be used to decide whether power method can be used for a given matrix. We state this theorem without proof and discuss its application to power method. Chapter 4 introduces various iterative methods for a nonlinear equation and their convergence anal-ysis. The methods are further extended to system of nonlinear equations.

ysis of the output voltage with this method is not discussed. Except for the above methods, two over-modulation methods for CMCs based on carrier-based modulation are proposed in [23], denoted as static method and dynamic method, and the instantaneous maximum VTR is 1.0 in the dynamic method, whereas the VTR is less than 1.0 but more than 0.866 ...

tial, the dynamics of this system is very far from the ergodic form generic to non-integrable Hamilto-nian systems. In particular, systematic simulations reveal that the NLS equation with a self-repulsive nonlinearity, $g > 0$ in Eq.
